Before the launch of the programme a two day National Thematic Workshop was organised on best practices which seeks to evolve focused strategy recommendations for women & child development, informed by best practices and innovative approaches on key themes that have worked well in different states and Districts. The workshop provides a theme based platform for presenting and discussing these innovative models, through dialogue with other states/ UTs, sectors, experts and voluntary agencies enabling inter-state sharing and learning. The focus is on understanding what is new in these best practices and how is the information different. The workshop also enabled a synthesis of lessons learnt for the shaping of a strategy framework that reflect innovation and enables positive adaptation and replication of these best practices within the state and in other states and UTs.
